Playing...

Another northern Indiana September marked the arrival of 1100 transients to Goshen College. Whether at work, at play, or just asleep, it was Goshen's people that turned this Mennonite liberal arts college into a way of life. As the seasons circled, the turning leaves and falling snow gave a new yet familiar pattern to the cycles of life.

Renovating...

Buzzing saws added to a symphony of renovation throughout the summer and early months of the new school year. Students, workers, and even faculty converged on building after building, giving each dorm varying degrees of attention. They repainted, rewired, and installed new furniture to accommodate students a bit more comfortably than in the past.

Relaxing...

Many Goshen students lived in dorms, greeted morning and evening by the same four walls they and their roommates decorated all year. Other students chose to live in small group housing units. In this setting, they learned to know the sleeping, eating, studying, and social habits of their friends. They appreciated the middle stage between dorm and independent living.

Living...

Some students opted to live away from campus in the relative privacy of homes or apartments. The legendary trailer court behind Yoder dorm provided housing for married students and families. Other students lived farther from campus, enjoying the independence of having places of their own, cooking their own meals, and paying their own electric bills.

Speculating...

Floormates in the dorms got to know each other simply by living side-by-side and meeting in the hallways. But organized floor activities helped transform neighbors into friends. Floor members gathered together for trips to Merry Lea, visits to churches, social activities at Brunk's Cabin, and roommate dates.

Working...

Paying tuition, purchasing books, and spending money for social activities made earning extra cash a priority for many students. They served meals, graded exams, tutored, cleaned, repaired, and anticipated checks at the end of each month. Some students worked off campus in restaurants, factories, stores, and offices. New additions to Goshen, including McDonald's and Augsburger's, presented new spending and earning possibilities for the campus.

Changing...

Goshen's weather proved unpredictable with October snow storms preceding 60 degree weekends in November. As the seasons changed, reversed, and moved on again, people in need of diversion climbed trees, built snow sculptures, and played football. And every morning, roommates debated whether they should wear shorts or winter coats.

Recreating...

The union, true to its name, saw more students and faculty than any other building on campus. Owners of empty mailboxes read the Opinion Board and Communicator instead of letters. The Leaf Raker provided a place for procrastinaters to talk to friends, drink coffee, and eat. Others relaxed in the Game Room with video games, ping pong, or pool.

Organizing...

Goshen occasionally set aside academic endeavors for physical ones. The lawns in front of Yoder and Coffman saw frequent games of Ultimate Frisbee and football. As winter arrived, enthusiasts drifted inside to play basketball. And when warmer weather returned, they moved back outside to the sand volleyball pit and tennis courts.

People...

Life at Goshen College was more than books and classes. New friends and new ideas abounded. Sharing and processing experiences allowed for personal change.

WGCS

1989-90 brought some significant changes to WGCS. The format wa altered to present a more upbeat morning show, a stronger sports program, an the addition of a news program.

The news program added a local emphasis and provided an opportunit for broadcast journalism students to air the products of their interviews an writing. An expanded state and world news program added a second voice aside from the announcer, to the morning broadcasts.

Fanning to flame our smoldering firecrackers

There have been a few moments in college that I will treasure most dearly. Unlike many others in my memory, these few are unique in a way that is almost unexplainable.

The feeling is best described as a firecracker, a cherry bomb of sorts. The energy in these moments is the burning of the wick, smoldering harmlessly until it reaches the gunpowder.

If all goes well, the firecracker explodes, releasing all of the pent up potential. Small pieces of firecracker float in the surrounding air as smoke, quickly altering the atmosphere around the explosion.

If the firecracker does not ignite quite as planned, the wick burns down with no explosion, leaving the energy trapped inside. Sometimes the firecracker implodes on itself, causing complete self-destruction without affecting its surroundings.

My firecracker moments illustrate what college is all about. We are burning wicks, preparing to explode into the world around us. If we refuse to move on after this intense smoldering, we end up as dangerous duds, waiting to implode on ourselves. The energy is lost and the potential for damage is high.

Each time I've watched Dead Poets Society, a harshly nostalgic film about the life of teenage boys in boarding school, I am reminded of the smoldering preparation of school for our lives beyond our present states. Our ideas, thoughts and actions glow and brighten when fanned. They can't get too hot and high or we explode before we're ready for the next stage. We also can't let the thoughts and aspirations go dull or the firecracker never ignites and we are left alone in the cold.

The last scene of the film depicts so well the fanning to flame of a youth's explosion and his step into a new stage of life. He defies the people holding him back and moves on to carry his lost friend's flame.

It's oxymoronic when Robin Williams, who plays the progressive, anti-system school teacher, repeatedly says carpe diem, "seize the day," to fan his senior high school boys' dreams to flame. This Latin phrase describes enjoying the pleasures of the moment without concern for the future, a concept that is not often encouraged among our youth today. As college students our lives are centered around preparing for the future—getting just the right experiences for the resumé which will in turn get us just the right job.

Perhaps we could learn some valuable lessons by trying to incorporate our future-oriented lifestyles with a living-for-the-moment mentality. Neither the firecracker moments of our lives nor the poetical phrase of carpe deim gives us the whole picture of how full life can be.

New technology creates new ideas

The 1989-1990 Record had a new look due to the Macintosh computers GC installed over the summer. Using the "Macs," editors and staff members performed most layout and graphic design tasks which prior to this year had been done by hand. Although layout editors became peeved on several occasions by their computers' unwillingness to cooperate, the layout process sped up with the aid of the Macintosh's programs.

Each trimester's Record served the campus community a wide variety of articles focusing on campus events and issues as well as national and international events and issues which involved GC students. Top stories during the fall covered students' participation in the Housing NOW march in Washington DC, the effects of Hurricane Hugo and the San Francisco Earthquake on persons associated with GC, and the speech that activist Ralph Nader gave in the College Church.

The winter trimester Record informed readers about the implications of political developments in East Germany and South Africa as well as covering the close call that sister college Hesston had with a tornado which devastated the town of Hesston. Closer to home, readers followed the development of senior Christy Risser's anti-drunk-driving TV commercial and ascertained differing student opinions regarding homosexuality.

In the spring, the fate of campus paper recycling was reported on the front page as well as the groundbreaking of the Science Hall Annex. The second spring issue featured a special section devoted to a look back at the experiences of winter trimester SSTers.

Throughout the year, the Perspective pages remained a consistently strong section of the paper. The fall paper featured a column which sought to break down the stereotypes EMC and GC students hold of the other college. Writers from EMC and GC traded off each week as writers for the column.

A well-received column in the winter, "Windows to Reality," focused on faith issues, and writers from a diverse range of faith backgrounds contributed to it. The column was continued in the spring. Columns focusing on gender roles, minority issues, and environmental issues also engaged readers during parts of the year.

Broadside

The 1989-90 edition of Broadside provided the outlet for poetic voices on campus for the 13th consecutive year.

The Broadside board read and discussed poems submitted by anonymous authors. Questions and comments from discussion would be reviewed and often returned to the author for reply or further discussion. In addition to several student works, Broadside published original poems by Nick Lindsay, "The Dirt's Stirred Raw," and S.A. Memorial lecturer William Stafford, "Waiting for It."

Campus Activities Council

This past fall four people came together, elected by students, to form the CAC. They gave eachother a commitment to a cause to "make things happen." And so with Trish--the lady with the cash, the keys, and the enthusiasm to drive us on--we began our adventure. It was a sunny Goshen suppertime when Melissa, Rochelle, Dave, and I laced up our roller skates and paraded out in front of the cafeteria to promote roller-skating night. Crazy? Yes. Stupid? Perhaps. Did it work? YES!! A function that usually almost fills one bus packed two and more drove. This set a pace that we strove to maintain and we did. We brought back some old favorites; Capture the Flag and movie nights drew exceptional crowds. New stuff that really took off included a Christmas dance (a formal--we never looked so good!), the Iron Leaf Follies (a winter Fall Fest that was a blast). Of course all the hour afters, latenites, and kick-offs drew the campus together in a way far beyond the expectations we had. Dave left us and Willie, our "Quiz Master," came in the winter and found his notch. The supportuive excitement this campus gave us we tried to give back and, you know, I really think we did.

Ignoring the trend for black student clubs and organizations to fold across our nation, the BSU has struggled to stay active. We must survive as an organization of African-American and other black students in order to feel comfortable on this predominantly white campus, because the BSU is the only place where we are in the majority. This year, two major concerns have been the division of the black student population and the lack of faculty and staff who can support black students.

We are actively involved in Ethnic Arts Fair, and once again had a Black History Week. For the most part, though, we held formal and informal meetings and activities in an attempt to make the minority students feel more at home on campus and in Goshen, where we're faced with many racist views.

COKE

This year was GC's second year with an active Habitat chapter. The group had two major goals: to increase student awareness of housing problems and to establish several work days and fund raisers.

During the year, GC volunteers organized a chapel, and participated is several work days on houses in Elkhart.

They sponsored a car smash called "Hit for Humanity" in the fall and held a successful February dance. In addition to these fun efforts, forty students solicited sponsors and donated a Saturday in March to pick up trash in Goshen, bringing in $2,200. The money was donated to the national and local efforts to eliminate poverty housing.

Habitat felt they had a profitable and productive year, and looks forward to continued campus support, growth, and efforts to build houses for those in need.

Accounting

The opportunity to teach in a larger program at my alma mater brought me back to Goshen College from Bethel College in Kansas four years ago. Since there are two accounting professors, I am teaching fewer courses than at Bethel. Also, there are opportunities for contact with the local business community through the department's Managemement Development Program.

I enjoy teaching accounting because it represents a professional discipline that integrates a lot of liberal arts concepts: problem solving, communication, and good relationship skills. I enjoy sharing my knowledge with others and helping them learn how to be good accountants.

-Ron Brunk, Associate Professor of Accounting

Business, Economics

Since 1981, when I joined the faculty, the department of accounting, business and economics, has experienced much change. It has doubled in size, to approximately 200 majors and minors. Programs have been strengthened to provide more breadth and depth of content. Faculty, to be expanded to six full-time persons in 1990-91, has extensive academic and business experience. And graduates of the department continue to be very successful in finding employment in for-profit and non-profit organizations where they demonstrate and live out the values espoused by Goshen College, and make their "imprint on the world."

I'm sure to speak for the department's other faculty members when I say that it is a privilege to teach at Goshen College and to have a small part in the development of persons who will provide business, community, and church leadership in the years ahead.

Secondary Education

Caring for ideas. Caring for young people. Those are driving motivations for teaching in secondary schools. And the more connections teachers make and invite their students to make between the ideas and the people they care for, the greater is the satisfaction in secondary teaching. It seems there is a growing percentage of students who are disconnected or alienated from people and from ideas. Great are the challenges for connecting.

And ample are the resources of Goshen College graduates to meet the challenge - a rich history of being nurtured in caring families and congregations and a college education where big ideas are explored in the context of real experiences with a diversity of people. That gives good warp and woof to weave a rich fabric of connections.

-John Jay Smith, Professor of Education, Director of Teacher Education

Physical Education

I started teaching at Goshen in 1976. I think I came here because I was intrigued with working with college-age students, having had ten years of experience with grades 1-12. Goshen had invited me to apply several times previously, and this last time seemed like a good time to consider the change. Initially, I told myself I'd stay for six or seven years--long enough to feel as though I could contribute to the job, but not too long. I've stayed much longer than I expected, perhaps because I've enjoyed the students and my colleagues. The job has been dynamic--I've always felt that I want to learn more. Why do I teach physical education? I connect with doing. I like action and play. I feel a strong sense of purpose when I can share my enthusiasm for doing and enable others to accomplish and improve.

-Sue Roth, Chair and Assistant Professor of Physical Education

Elementary Education

I taught in an elementary public school classroom for a number of years before coming to Goshen College three years ago. As a member of the teaching education faculty, I have the opportunity to work closely with preservice/beginning teachers who are deeply committed to establishing classrooms built on the strengths of individual students. I am particularly interested in finding ways to build bridges between educational theory/research and the practice of teaching. Currently I am director of elementary student teaching with responsiblilities for supervising student teaching and senior seminar. Other courses I am teaching include intro. to education, ed. psychology, elementary curriculum studies, and intro. to exceptional students.

Computer Systems

My decision to come to Goshen College was very complex and difficult because it involved a major career change - as well as a geographic relocation. For the previous nine years I had worked as an electrical design engineer in Eastern Pennsylvania. My work included the hardware and software design of computer automated testing equipment. Moving to Goshen gave me the opportunity to combine my experience in computing with a long-held desire to teach at the college level. My interest in teaching was stimulated by eduction courses I took as an undergraduate and three years of teaching physics and mathematics in Nigeria with MCC.

Initially, I planned to stay at Goshen for about two years to satisfy my interest in college teaching. However, after six years, I have little interest in returning to my previous vocation.

There are several reasons I remain at Goshen: I appreciate the intellectual challenges and stimulation, I enjoy my teaching and interaction with students, and I like the environment and close relationships found in a small college.

Physics,

I came here from Bethel College (Kansas) in 1985, accepting Goshen's offer because of a sense that this was where the Lord wanted me. My research is in theoretical physics.

Biology

In my view, working at Goshen College is both a privelege and a calling. It is a privelege because it has been a pleasure to learn to know so many fine individuals, including students, faculty and staff. It is a calling in the general sense that anyone may feel called by God to a particular job; it is also a calling in the sense of directly serving the church. I have been at Goshen College for ten years. In that time there have been many good experiences; there have also been a few bad ones, but I have never regretted my decision to come here. The primary courses which I have been teaching have been Human Anatomy and Physiology, Human Pathophysiology, Developmental Vertebrate Biology, and Biochemistry. These courses have fit both my educational background and my interests.

At various times in my life I have made job changes. During the decision process leading to these changes I have usually considered three questions: What could I contribute to this new position? How would this job impact my personal and professional growth? Does this position seem to fit with what it means to be part of God's Kingdom and work?

I have found teaching at Goshen College to be a positive response to these questions. The challenge of motivating students to learn for themselves, the quality of interaction with students and colleagues, and a sense that I have been called by the church makes being at Goshen College a worthwhile and special experience.

I came to Goshen College in 1962. I was hired specifically for three years so that three nursing faculty could take sabbatical leaves in successive years. I met my husband who joined the faculty during my second year. We had a campus romance; in fact, my husband proposed to me in my office. I chose to stay at Goshen College these 28 years because I believe deeply in the mission of the College. I value the Christian commitment to my faculty and staff colleagues and students. I especially value the transcultural and international emphasis on our campus. I travel vicariously through the experiences of faculty and students. Goshen College also has given my family the opportunity to travel and study. We led SST units in three countries, as well as Goshen in Europe. At Goshen I have the privilege of interacting with faculty from many different disciplines which enriches my own work in nursing. I am thankful, too, for the many teaching and administrative opportunities I have had through the years , all of which have helped to prepare me for these past eleven years of teaching nursing research and serving as the director of the nursing division.

As a college student I was captivated when I read Colin Turnbull's ethnography (The Forest People) about the pygmies of the Ituri Forest in Zaire. Imagine getting paid to try to understand and describe a culture radically different from one's own. The study of sociology and anthropology has given me the opportunity to follow in the tradition of Turnbull. Experiences in Haiti, among Native people in the U.S. and Canada, in Guadeloupe, working with Indo-Chinese and Central American refugees, and in the Old Order Amish communities of northern Indiana have enriched my life immensely.

Teaching sociology and anthropology has given me the opportunity to introduce students to the diversity and richness of human societies and cultures. Why teach at Goshen College? Because I am comitted to the Mennonite Church and to playing a small part in equipping young people with the vision and the skills that they will need to face the 21st century.

-Thomas J.Meyers, Associate Professor of Sociology

Social Work

An MCC voluntary service assignment introduced me to the profession of social work. My choice to pursue the educational preparation for social work has, in the intervening years, been positively confirmed. I have practiced in a wide variety of settings. I have helped couples learn how to resolve differences; parents and children to grow together; individuals to search for new meaning for their lives; and, most recently, students to pursue an educational goal. My faith in persons--their worth and dignity--and the resilience of the human spirit are constantly reaffirmed. I have been personally challenged to continue to learn and grow. Social work for me is a synergistic process which remains a rewarding way to use my energies and abilities.

Anna Bowman, Asssociate Professor of Social Work and Director of Women's Studies

Foods And Nutrition

Why would a person commute from Fort Wayne to teach at Goshen College? At first, just the opportunity to serve God was the reason; but commitment to students who see the world outside their own sphere has kept me on the road for three years. The food and nutrition/dietetics program prepares students for service abroad and at home. As a profession, dietetic practitioners need to have an appreciation of other cultures. Goshen College provides this opportunity.

Family Life

From the time I was a boy attending alumni events with my father, Goshen College has been a part of my life. I never considered attending any other college. My commitment to the Mennonite Church was cemented while I was a student, and GC and its mission here remained a central focus in my life.

When the opportunity came in 1958 to practice medicine at Goshen, I took it eagerly. In 1967 I became the college physician, and in 1986 I added the course on the use and abuse of alcohol and other drugs. The sense of call, the sense of fulfillment, and contiuing opportunity have kept me here.

English

I teach literature because to do so "I dwell in possibility," as Emily Dickinson suggests - the possibility of imaginative knowing, the possibility of words becoming flesh for me and my students, the possibility of students' lives. I teach at Goshen because here we believe in the integration of imagination and faith. I also teach here because it provides an excellent home from which to reach out to the diverse worlds of Costa Rica, China, and Japan - both through experience and through literary studies. Students choose English for many reasons: for the broad knowledge of people and places and ideas it provides as a springboard to opportunity, for the "felt knowing" that comes through exposure to the best literary minds, for preparation to teach or to travel, for the sheer pleasure of reading and imagining - usually some combination of these.

For me, it is a privilege to teach French and colloquium, as well as an occasional course in Women's Studies, at Goshen. Each subject calls me to a different aspect of my teaching vocation and responds to a different facet of Goshen's mission. Through French I can enable others to participate in others' cultures and prepare to take their places in the global village. It is a joy to work with French minors and interdisciplinary French majors, hearing about their plans for travel and further study in the Francophone places I know and love. Through colloquium, I can get to know students personally through literature, journals, and our social or private times together and follow them in their college years of intellectual and spiritual growth. Through a course such as Women in Text and Image, I work with individuals to develop their own critical perspectives on the humanities and sciences, expressing their views in a variety of media. Spanish

When I was the age of most of my students I spent several years in Puerto Rico and discovered the excitement of learning another language. One of the most rewarding personal experiences about speaking a foreign language is the ability to enter into that mysterious world of the Spanish-speaker and function there totally independent of one's own language. I find it particularly enjoyable to see this begin to happen in the classroom and then become real communication as the students here participate in the Study Service Term. I am always impressed by the students' inner resources, spiritual strengths and resiliency both in the classroom and during their international experience. I think that this must be one of the main reasons that I teach at Goshen College. The students teach me more than I teach them.

-Robert L.Yoder, Associate Professor of Spanish; Chair, Dpt. of Foriegn Language

Music

I returned to the Goshen community in 1976 as a single parent of a four-year-old daughter. My family lives here and offered me assistance, which I needed. I contacted the music department at Goshen College, where I had graduated with a music education degree twelve years earlier. I told them I was available to teach private voice if they needed anyone, which they did not because they had two voice and choral men already. Two weeks later, Lon Sherer phoned and said they had so many students registered for private voice that they needed me to teach the overflow. My six-private-voice studio has blossomed into a studio of over twenty private voice students in the thirteen years I have been teaching here. I have become busy with other assignments and classes, such as voice classes, vocal pedagogy, choirs, education classes, and SST. There were some hard, busy, and stressful times for me trying to parent and teach, but I have found tremendous support and understanding from my colleagues in the music department. I have experienced many changes in attitudes towards me as a divorced, single parent. These changes in attitudes are one of the prime appreciations I have and weigh heavily on why I remain here.

Kay Montgomery, Associate Professor of Music

Art

When I came as a sabbatical replacement in 1976, I did not anticipate such an enduring connection with Goshen College. It has been an interesting challenge involving a teaching load that has evolved from studio teaching only to one that leans more to lecture situations in art history and the arts. The Mennonite exposure has provided me with some different perspectives and has helped clarify my own beliefs. But the most significant aspect of my experience at Goshen has been the contact and relationships with students and faculty.

-Judy Wenig-Horswell , Associate Professor of Art

Theatre

In 1982 my family and I made a transcontinental move from sunny and scenic California to Goshen. After studying in two large West Coast University theatre programs, I was eager to begin teaching in a smaller liberal arts college. Goshen College appeared to be an ideal environment where I could continue to explore interdisciplinary interests in theatre and religion. At Goshen College my responsibilities have centered on theatre, namely, directing the theatre productions and teaching theatre courses. In addition, I have taught speech, oral interpretation, and peace studies. The dynamic students, challenging professional opportunities, faith environment, and a curriculum informed by global perspectives has continued to nurture my commitment to Goshen College.

Bible and Religion

I came to Goshen College in 1987 to teach philosophy and religion in the department of Bible, religion and philosophy. What attracted me to this opportunity was the fact that it offered me a chance to help students to learn to think carefully and responsibly about important and basic matters, such as God, human nature, free will, good and evil, right and wrong, truth and falsehood, knowledge and belief, etc. The fact that Goshen is a Christian Mennonite College makes it a natural place to offer students an Anabaptist Christian perspective on these matters.

I consider it a privelege to play a small part in the development of students who will be important contributors to the church and the world in the decades ahead.

-Caleb Miller, Assistant Professor of Philosophy and Religion

History

My direct exposure to serious academic history came with my first Western Civ course taught by Professor John Oyer. My association with Dr. Oyer, as a student, then as a student assistant, teaching fellow, and finally as a colleague, helped focus both my learning and my teaching. My study of history has brought much meaning to my life. Everything that happens has a past; to understand that connection is, to me, an open door to new meaning and an enrichment of all my life. History is a glue that holds everything together in a unity that makes the world more comprehendable to me.

James Hertzler, Chair and Professor of History

Hispanic Ministries

This is my seventh year with Hispanic ministries at Goshen College. I teach, counsel, recruit students, and do continuing education for Hispanic leaders across the country. I stay here because I enjoy seeing students getting their college education and serving in pastorates, administration, or congregational leadership. Being a teacher today is rewarding. In networking with students, creating and sharing information and knowledge, our faith grows. As a teacher, I honor history, but I am also challenged by the future, and that is rewarding in my profession.

Jose Ortiz, Director and Associate Professor of Hispanic Ministries

Spheres of Influence

Our Expanding Sphere

I spent a summer afternoon with a friend walking along a hillside over-looking the continually deteriorating environment of Jena, the hauntingly beautiful base city for Goshen's spring SST unit. We talked about classes, Maracuja, life, and the future of the German Democratic Republic (GDR). As we walked, we passed a herd of sheep confined to an area by a fence. It was evident to us at the time that the economic oppression of the people in the GDR would inevitably call forth and engender every kind of political oppression and social humiliation. Vladimir Lenin, a major influence on the socialist theology, one stated, " A slave who has become conscious of his slavery and has risen to struggle for his emancipation has already half ceased to be a slave." He addressed these words to a society wholly based on the exploitation of the vast masses of the working class by the tiny minority of the landowner and capitalist classes. The hypocrisy between theory and practice may be the sole cause for downfall of the system in the GDR.

Now that the dam has burst, no one knows what will stand and what will be swept away. I returned to the GDR in late December to discover a state that, after 37 years of dedicating itself to the systematic imprisonment of it's population, had bashed gaping holes in the political system as well as the 28 year-old symbol of the Cold War ...the Berlin Wall. This symbol has bottled up far more than the frustrations of 17 million East Germans: it has held back a new Europe, never allowing it to emerge from the rubble of World War II. But now people were passing through the same wall by the hundreds, some just to visit, some never to return.

The changes were noticeable not only in Berlin. Western automobiles saturated the East German Autobahns, leaving the two-cylinder Trabants in the dust. And some stores cast out the strict price controls and had sales to benefit the citizens.

For the West, the holes in the Wall make German reunification inevitable. From our point of view, what ended in November was not the separation of the people, but the partition of the country. But while the East Germans are optimistic about the changes, they realize that reassociation of a German nation, rather than reunification, is the task at hand.

On my return visit I took the time to retrace my steps along the path on the hillside that I had taken the previous summer. Ironically ...the sheep were no longer there.

GERMAN DEMOCRATIC REPUBLIC SST

Continual Changes; Poland

Negotiations between the opposition and the government in Poland led to partially free elections in June 1989. The Solidarity-led opposition won all but one of the seats they were allowed to contest, but still comprised only one-third of Parliament. No communist prime minister was able to form a cabinet, so in late August, Soldarity activist and Catholic intellectual, Tadeusz Mazowiecki, was given the task.

Mazowiecki's government quickly ended press censorship and allowed full freedoms of speech, association and assembly. To revitalize the nation's wheezing and mismanaged economy, the government chose a radical shock-treatment to jolt the country toward a free-market system. The plan ended most subsidies and price controls and allowed unprofitable enterprises to fail.

When the program went into effect on Jan. 1, 1990, the government hoped its popular support would prove stronger than public discontent over resulting price increases and unemployment. The government's popularity increased even during the rocky beginnings, and by March inflation dropped sharply as market forces began to take effect, although concern about unemployment remained.

The changes within Poland served as a catalyst for democratic revolution throughout Eastern Europe, but also brought new worries. Part of eastern Germany was ceded to Poland in 1945 as compensation for Polish land seized by the Soviets, and Poles feared that a reunited Germany might try to reclaim the territory. The government asked Soviet troops to remain as a security gaurantee. -Steve Shirk

Leaders of the seven most powerful Western nations gathered in fornt of the Louvre Pyramid for the opening session of the Edonomic summit in Paris.

They pledged to address the environmental problems that threaten the planet, and they encorsed a significant strategic switch in the way rich countries cope with the Third World's staggering $1.3 trillion debt.

For the first time, the seven leaders agreed that the best way to ease the debt burden of poorer nations is to persuade banks to provide some relief instead of simply issuing new loans.

The problems of terrorism, narcotics, and East-West relations were also addressed. -AP News

Leaving a trail of death and destruction across the Caribbean, Hurricane Hugo smashed into the coastal city of Charleston, South Carolina on September 22, 1989.

A catastrophic earthquake rocked Northern California on October 17, killing at least 62 people and injuring hundreds, caving in bridges and freeways, igniting fires and causing widespread damage.

Thequake struck during the evening rush hour, just as Game 3 of the World Series was about to begin, and registered 6.9 on the Richter scale.

United Airlines pilot, Captain Al Haynes, declared, "There is no hero" in the fiery DC-10 crash in which 185 of the 296 passengers survived. Aviation experts have credited Haynes with keeping the craft aloft until he reached the airport, where hundreds of emergency workers were waiting.

The flight crew never doubted the stricken jetliner would make it to Sioux Gateway Airport, where the plane crash-landed short of the runway, flipped and broke apart.

"We must not forget that 111 people perished in this accident. This crew ...is dedicated to finding the cause of this accident so we can never have it happen again," said Haynes. -AP News

The Exxon Valdez struck Bligh Reef about 25 miles from Valdez, Alaska, ripping holes in its hull and gushing millions of gallons of thick crude oil into pristine Prince William Sound. The result was the largest oil spill in U.S. history.

Thousands of workers have helped scrub the oil-fouled shorelines, but as one environmental disaster consultant said, "A spill of this size in such a complex environment promises to be a cleanup nightmare." -AP News

A fiery explosion rocked the battleship, U.S.S. Iowa, killing 47 sailors and injuring many others.

The explosion occurred on April 19, 1989, in one of the battleship's three 16-inch gun turrets as the ship was taking part in a gunnery exercise about 330 miles northeast of Puerto Rico. -AP-News

Voyager capped its historic 4.43-billion-mile, 12-year tour of four planets when it skimmed 3,048 miles over Neptune's north pole in August, then dove past Triton, the planet's largest moon. It made its closest approach about 23,900 miles above the moon's surface at 2:10 a.m. on August 25, 1989.

Voyager was nearly 4.5 billion miles along a curving path that took it from Earth in 1977, past Jupiter in 1979, Saturn in 1981, and Uranus in 1986, and now past Neptune in search of the edge of the solar system. Voyager 1 explored Jupiter in 1979 and Saturn in 1980.

"If you want to understand Earth, go look at other worlds," said astronomer Carl Sagan, a member of the team that analyzed about 81,000 photographs taken by Voyager 2 and its twin, Voyager 1 -AP News

The Supreme court has limited the power of states to outlw the desecration or destruction of the American flag.

Justice William J. Brennan, writing for the court, said, "If there is a bedrock principal underlying the 1st Amendment, it is that the government may not prohibit the expression of an idea simply because society finds the idea itself offensive or disagreeable."

"We do not consecrate the flag by punishing its desecration, for in doing so we dilute the freedom that this cherished emblem represents." -AP News
